NPCL PRESENTS:

Building Strong Families Series: Relationship Skills for Strong Families

BECOME A CERTIFIED TRAINER IN WORKING WITH FAMILIES

SFT trains practitioners in the effective use of The Relationship Skills for Strong Families curriculum developed by Dr. Jeffery M. Johnson. The Relationship Skills for Strong Families curriculum is based on real experiences and challenges of fragile family settings. Through group sessions, the curriculum offers practitioners tools to successfully enhance the relationship functioning of low-income, married, and never-married couples with children. The areas covered in the curriculum include: managing stress; conflict resolution and building relationships; communication skills; and, values and relationships. The curriculum also offers advice on facilitating groups and a theory of change methodology for training and participant learning.

The training will be led by Dr. Jeffery M. Johnson, President of the National Partnership for Community Leadership (NPCL). For two decades, Dr. Johnson has served as a Master Trainer and has conducted hundreds of workshops on building strong families based on Relationship Skills for Strong Families which, he authored. He has been directly involved in the nation's largest projects involving men, fathers, and families and served as lead consultant in the Ford Foundation's Strengthening Fragile Families Initiative.
